Financial Power Purchase Agreements (FPPAs) are emerging as a great way for renewable producers to finance new projects. They also provide corporate off-takers the ability to participate in meeting their sustainable net-zero carbon goals.

The financial PPA market is expected to continue growing as large corporations and governments embrace the benefits of renewable energies. As more companies get involved it is expected to broaden the complexity of derivatives contracts to meet specific energy needs.

Experts who understand PPAs and regulatory reporting

Unlike traditional PPAs signed between renewable producers and utility firm off-takers with physical delivery of electricity, FPPAs operate as a derivative transaction that is cash settled.

The result is that a FPPA is defined as a bilateral over the counter (OTC) derivative trade and falls under scope for derivative regulation such as EMIR in the EU & UK, Dodd-Frank (CFTC) in the U.S and ASIC in Australia.

As leaders in OTC transaction reporting, with millions of transactions submitted daily, we have the expertise to report your FPPAs to regulators with a very quick turnaround. Our experts are uniquely positioned to help you as they understand both FPPAs and OTC derivative reporting.
